

TRAINEESHIPS in Sport and Recreation

An Australian Apprenticeship, also known as a traineeship, is a structured work based program that allows someone to be employed and at the same time train in skills relevant to your business or organisation.

There are two elements to a Traineeship - an on- the- job employment component which is based with an employer organisation and an educational training component undertaken with a registered training organisation such as TAFE.

Sport and recreation trainees work in the sport, fitness, outdoor recreation and community recreation sector in a diverse range of jobs. Traineeships in the industry are available at Certificate II, III and IV. They can be undertaken full-time, part-time or through school-based arrangements.

Benefits to the employer:

- Access to Government financial incentives (eligibility conditions apply)
- Training is tailored to the business they are working in
- Affordable wage rates for business owners
- Employ a trainee either full-time, part-time or a student who is still attending school.

Benefits to the trainee:

- Upon completion, trainees will have learnt new skills and gained experience and confidence working in a real job, making them valuable employees
- Earn a wage while they learn
- Gain a nationally recognised qualification
- Undertake training as part of work hours.
